

[This page prints out on 1 sheet]

The Pediatric Audiologist and Hearing Aids

Your child should go to a pediatric audiologist for an audiogram. The audiogram will tell you more about his hearing loss. He will need his hearing aids checked then too. Read these pages to find out when to get your child's hearing tested and how the audiologist can help your child with his hearing and hearing aids.

A pediatric audiologist is very important

- They have the most experience working with deaf and hard-of-hearing children.
- They can best answer your questions about your child's deafness.
- If your child has a hearing loss, he needs to go to a pediatric audiologist.

Find out more:

- How often your child's hearing should be tested
(<http://www.raisingdeafkids.org/help/tech/hearingaids/audi2.jsp>)
- How the audiologist helps with hearing aids
(<http://www.raisingdeafkids.org/help/tech/hearingaids/audi3.jsp>)

Last updated: October 29, 2004

You can find this page online at:

<http://www.raisingdeafkids.org/help/tech/hearingaids/audi.jsp>